WELCOMING MESSAGE

It is a special pleasure for all of us in the Organizing Committee to welcome you in Athens to the 16th International Forum of Psychoanalysis.

The host society of the 2010 Forum is the Hellenic Society of Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy.

The theme – the interplay between the intrapsychic and the intersubjective – is at the very heart of contemporary psychoanalytic thinking, due to the fact that there is now widespread recognition that the concept of the subject itself belongs both to the intrapsychic and the interpersonal realms. The discussion is not just theoretical, but the implications refer mainly to how we understand the clinical issues and the analyst-analysand relationship. We therefore believe that many theoretical and clinical issues will be clarified in the course of our discussions in the Forum.

The overwhelming response to our invitation, not only from members of the constituent societies of the I.F.P.S. but also from the larger psychoanalytic community, accounts for the rich and diverse scientific program of the Forum.

We consider it a special honor the fact that we have with us so many world-renown prominent psychoanalysts. The high caliber of the active participants coming from all over the world constitutes the best guarantee for the success of our endeavor.

Special reference should be made to the interdisciplinary event on “Neurosciences, psychoanalysis and medication: Research and applications” taking place on the first day of the meeting. Our aim is to discuss the interaction between Neurosciences and Psychoanalysis and to bring forth current theoretical and clinical approaches of the etiology and the type of treatment of disorders, such as psychotic, severely depressive and borderline cases, where psychoanalytic psychotherapy combined with pharmaceutical intervention is recommended.

Another novel element introduced in this year’s Forum is the Award for best paper presented by a Candidate, the Award being the publication of the best paper in the International Forum of Psychoanalysis. In this respect, we have pleasure in announcing that twelve papers have been short-listed. The Award ceremony will take place in the course of the Closing Session.

In closing, we extend to you all a most warm welcome, while expressing our sincere hope that you will carry back home the most pleasant memories of your stay.
